THE STREETS OF PHILADELPHIA...AND PITTSBURGH

PIECES OF REESE'S

Last weekend, the Hershey Company was hit with a huge accusation from the Reese's family. Brad Reese, the grandson of the Reese's cup inventor, accused the Hershey Company of swapping out original ingredients in the Reese's cups. Specifically, Reese believes that original, key ingredients have been swapped for lesser ones that alter the special, original taste. The Hershey Company, however, claims that while key ingredients have remained the same, certain recipe adjustments have been made throughout the years for "new shapes, sizes, and innovations."

WHOLE LOTTA DOUGH

Pim Marie Anorak Neill, a Daisy Girl Scout in Pittsburgh, has a mission to sell the most Girl Scout cookies, and it looks like she has succeeded. The 6-year-old told her father about her goal, and they put the plan in motion. Pim reached out to her community with fliers, signs, and even made a viral video. Pim ended up selling over 100,000 boxes of cookies, smashing the previous state record of 8,378.

NEW DEAL

Warner Bros. announced that they are restarting talks with Paramount about potential acquisition of all of Warner Discovery, including CNN and TNT. This comes after Paramount upped its all-cash offer to $77.9 billion last week. Netflix is still the main competitor to Paramount in the bidding war. Paramount is willing to pay the $2.8 billion termination fee to keep Netflix out of the conversation.
