BREATHE (IN THE AIR)

Pennsylvania has a new state park, and it is underground! Laurel Caverns has become the newest state park and the first ever underground park in PA. PA DCNR Secretary Cindy Dunn announced the park's opening yesterday, which is located in Farmington. The 435 acre park features over 4 miles of caves to explore and will help contribute to the $20 billion that outdoor recreation brings to the state's economy.

THE GREAT GIG IN THE SKY

The crew of Artemis II has officially gone further from Earth than any other humans in history. They exceeded the previous record held by the Apollo program for 53 years. The ship passed around the dark side of the moon and will make its way back to Earth with a splashdown in the Pacific Ocean anticipated this Friday.

The Green Party of Pennsylvania officially announced Tony Dastra as their candidate for Governor. Dastra was officially endorsed by the party on March 8th. Previously, he was the Green Party candidate for Mayor of Lancaster City in 2025. No donations from corporations or corporate PACs will be accepted, according to Dastra.

ON THE RUN

Yesterday, around 9:30AM, a Google Street View Car was seen cruising the Harrisburg area. The car holds a camera that captures and presents a street view of communities and landmarks around the world. The last time the car captured Central PA was in September of 2023. The view can be seen via Google Maps, and individuals can request to have their properties blurred if they wish.

MONEY

Last night, the Michigan Wolverines were crowned Men's Basketball National Champions, beating UConn 69-63. This is the second title won by the Wolverines and the first since 1989. The championship comes in just the second season of Coach Dusty May's tenure at Michigan. In the Women's tournament, newly joined Big Ten's UCLA beat South Carolina 79-51 on Sunday afternoon. This marks UCLA's first Women's Basketball National Championship, led by a starting lineup of all seniors.
