PA GOVERNOR

Governor Josh Shapiro will remain in the Governor's seat for another term after beating Republican challenger Stacy Garrity in yesterday's election. Shapiro came away with 60% of the vote, Garrity with 39% and Ken Krawchuk of the Libertarian Party had 1% of the vote. Lieutenant Governor Austin Davis will remain in his role as well for another term. Across the country, there will be a majority of Democrat governors for the first time since 2010.

PA SENATE

For the first time in over 30 years, the PA Senate will be controlled by the Democrats. This accomplishes the Democrat's long-sought trifecta for Pennsylvania state government. Several key seats were being closely watched but ultimately flipped blue, with the Republicans only picking up one seat while the Democrats picked up four.

PA HOUSE

In the State House, the Democrats have expanded their majority, picking up many seats across the Commonwealth. Some are still too close to call and will most likely go to a recount. All 203 members were up for re-election with several members announcing retirement earlier this year. Only one incumbent Democrat will not return to Harrisburg next session.

U.S. SENATE

Continuing a successful night for Democrats, U.S. Senate seats were flipped in Iowa, Kansas, North Carolina, Ohio, South Carolina and Texas. The Democrats will have control of the chamber, even with two races left to call. Pennsylvania had no U.S. Senate races on this midterm ballot, and the next race will be in 2028.

U.S. HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Lastly, the Democrats also took control of the U.S. House, with four Pennsylvania seats flipping blue. Across the country, closely watched races were announced as Democrat winners throughout the night. There are still several races across the country that are too close to call; however, all the Pennsylvania races have been called.
