The State House will convene at 12pm

RE-ORG

Today, the State House will convene at noon for session and the purpose of leadership reorganization. It is expected that the Democrats will not see many changes, if any, while the Republicans will have to replace State Representative Sheryl Delozier's position as Caucus Administrator. On the other side of the building, the Senate Democrats are planning to caucus in Harrisburg on Thursday without gaveling in to reorganize its leadership prior to returning to formal session next week

TOO CLOSE TO CALL

After Election Day last Tuesday, there was still one State House race considered too close to call. On Friday, Democrat Brad Chambers took the lead with 40 votes after provisional ballots were counted, putting him in front of Representative Brett Miller. Although Chambers has declared victory, the race has not yet officially been called and still needs to be certified. There are still 14 military ballots outstanding, and some of the provisional ballots are being challenged. If these results stay, Chambers will take the House majority to 114.

CHRISTMAS IS COMING

The big tree is in the big apple! This year's Rockefeller Center Christmas Tree, a 76-foot Norway spruce from West Edmeston, New York, has landed in Manhattan, where it will be decorated with more than 50,000 LED lights and topped with the iconic Swarovski star ahead of the December 2 lighting ceremony. After the holidays, the tree will be milled into lumber and donated to Habitat for Humanity.
